For the United States Air Force, the mission to fly, fight and win in air, space and cyberspace requires technical solutions that address current threats and prepare for undiscovered challenges. Invictus JV, LLC, a joint venture between Oasys International and Knight Point Systems, a Perspecta company, offers that capability as a prime contractor on the Small Business Enterprise Applications Solutions (SBEAS) indefinite delivery/indefinite quantity contract through the Air Force Materiel Command.

On the program, Invictus can provide the Air Force with IT solutions that ensure long-term and high performance.

SBEAS calls for IT solutions in a network-centric environment, including high-value solutions for:

- Cloud/data center migration, application rationalization and storage management
- Systems engineering, architecture and technical management
- Software development that includes use of agile and other methodologies
- Cybersecurity engineering, information assurance and security operations center management

- Administration of applications, databases and systems
- Modernization/decommissioning of hardware and software including mobile applications

Supporting functions available under SBEAS are:

- IT/business analysis for functional areas such as operations and logistics
- User training and service desk
- Creating and managing system documentation

How to use SBEAS

SBEAS features streamlined ordering, no contract access fees and multiple ways to charge such as fixed price or by labor hour. Additionally, any agency can issue task orders under SBEAS that support Air Force requirements.
